Extra Access Information – Sirens, Women and the Sea

Sirens, Women and the Sea is an exhibition of paintings and sculptures.

The exhibition is on at Ferens Art Gallery from 14th February to 5th May 2025.

The exhibition is on in Galleries 4, 7 and 8. They are highlighted in yellow on the map.

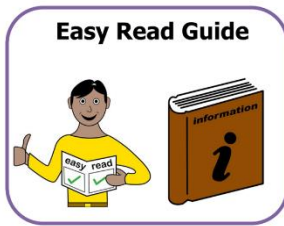

The part of the exhibition in gallery 4 was created by a group of young people called Future Ferens.

It is called Sirens: Out of the Blue.

There is level access to Galleries 4, 7 and 8.

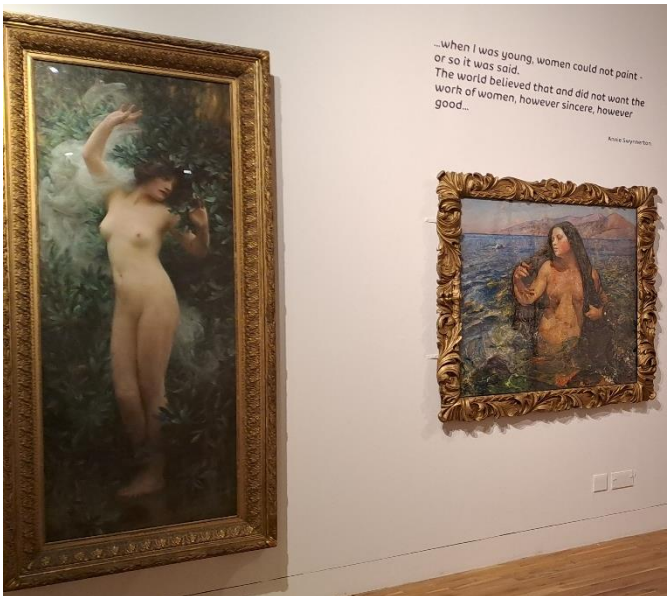

You can borrow a Quick or Full Access Guide, an Easy Read Guide and a Visual Story to the whole gallery from the front desk or download them from our website.

This is an Easy Read Guide to visiting Ferens Art Gallery.

Themes in the exhibition – Trigger Warnings

The exhibition is about how women are shown as mermaids (or sirens) in modern art and art from the past.

There are some artworks which have naked women in them.

In some of the information for the artworks it talks about sexual assault.

Touch

There are some artworks you can't touch to make sure they don't get damaged or visitors don't hurt themselves.

They will have labels that say please do not touch.

There are sensory baskets in Gallery 4 and Gallery 7 with things inspired by the artworks that you can touch.

Seating and Sensory Resources

There is a large print guide in each of the gallery spaces and a folder of braille interpretation in gallery 7.

You can borrow a stool if you need one to sit down.

There is a sofa to sit on in each of the rooms of the exhibition.

There are some videos. You can listen to the sound using our headphones.

The videos that have people speaking are subtitled.

Gallery 8 has a video in it which is playing in a slightly darker room.
